PLANE BREAKS CAULC MARK IN TILTS HERE

Donald Dick's Model Machine Disappears in Record Flight

Canadian record for gasoline-powered model airplanes was broken as the air most held at the airport Saturday afternoon after the model of the Edmonton Exhibition Association when one of the midget planes, built by Donald Dick, 12, 1238 9th avenue, climbed into the sky and disappeared after 20 seconds before disappearing from the view of the onlookers.

Although it was a big thing to watch to have his plane set a new Canadian record, Dick's record was just under three minutes—he enjoyed the fact that he could fly. For he lost his plane. When last seen by the timers and judges it was still climbing steeply and perfectly in straight current of air over the exhibition section of the city.

STILL MISSING
 A search all day Sunday failed to recover the silver machine which was a winged of about six feet and carries the letters C.F.D.I.E. It also carries the name and address of the owner, Donald Dick, 12, 1238 9th avenue, Edmonton.

Donald was not the only model plane to be seen at the Saturday. Arnold Nick's machine was crashed completely on its landing. The machine was broken when it crashed. The machine was spectacular as real planes in the air.

Douglas Ireland, who won second place with a flight of one minute and 30 seconds, lost his plane when it came down in the bushes just east of the airport. Third place was won by a plane built by Donald Dick, 12, 1238 9th avenue, Edmonton.

Of the 14 persons who entered the contest only six were able to complete and fly their planes. The contest was held at the airport. The contest was held at the airport.

Grand champion of the contest was Donald Dick, 12, 1238 9th avenue, Edmonton. He won with a flight of one minute and 30 seconds.

Herridge Playing Inglorious Role, Says Woodsworth

"Mr. Herridge is playing a rather inglorious role in trying to create factional friction instead of his much talked-about co-operation among the progressive political forces," declared J. S. Woodsworth, M.P., in clarifying the C.C.F. position.

Mr. Woodsworth, who was in Edmonton for the weekend to speak at the C.C.F. convention here.

"I think the statement made some days ago by M. J. Colwell, national chairman of the C.C.F., puts our position concerning the New Democracy movement very well and speaks for itself. Mr. Herridge seeks to make a distinction between his leadership, and the other officials of the C.C.F. respectively. He is 'inglorious' in the eyes of the C.C.F. members."

"He suggests the leadership alone is to be responsible for the C.C.F. movement, and the other officials of the C.C.F. are to be responsible for the C.C.F. movement. He is 'inglorious' in the eyes of the C.C.F. members."

ALL REJECTED IDEAS
 The fact that C.C.F. conventions recently held in British Columbia, Manitoba and Saskatchewan have almost unanimously rejected the idea of a merger with the New Democracy movement seems to be a clear indication of the C.C.F. members' attitude towards the New Democracy movement.

Mr. Herridge, said Mr. Woodsworth, is playing a rather inglorious role in trying to create factional friction instead of his much talked-about co-operation among the progressive forces.

"Instead of going into districts, such as New Brunswick and parts of Quebec, where there is a need to be done, and making his movement a national movement, he is playing a rather inglorious role in trying to create factional friction instead of his much talked-about co-operation among the progressive forces."

LEADERS' CAMP HELD BY C.G.I.T. FALLS RESORT

A most enjoyable leader camp for C.G.I.T. under the direction of Miss Isabel Home, was held at Falls Lake, Watrous, recently. The theme of camp was "The Royal Court" enlarged upon in the opening and closing ceremonies and the evening sessions, for life's quest of health, friendship, love, truth and happiness. A course in Bible study on the "Life of Jesus" according to St. Mark, was given by Rev. Mr. Beiser of Stony Plain.

OLD TIMERS HOLD ANNUAL PICNIC

Saskatoon Island Park was the scene of many a happy reunion for the old timers of Fairview. The picnic drew a crowd of upwards of two thousand to the popular resort. All old timers in the district who could possibly make it, were on hand for this big day of the year.

The Beaveridge band was in attendance. Softball, horse races and other sports were held. The club cake, managed by Tommy Poon, is putting on a new front to their building. When this is finished they intend rebuilding the inside of the cake.

Jim Stockdale, local farmer, died in the Provincial hospital this morning. He was suffering from a long period of pneumonia when pneumonia came on, and he died at the age of sixty and four children.

"Sculptured" Coiffure Makes Lovely Picture

By ALICIA HART

A woman's hair should be a coming and sculptured frame for her face. The art of hairdressing is so closely allied to the plastic art that it is practically impossible to separate the two.

There are the joint opinions of the nation's director of one of America's outstanding hair design artists and of McChelland Barclay, celebrated hairdresser.

Barclay says that brown hair is the most desirable, and that a well-known model is the outdoor type.

"This type of face needs the least possible embellishment. The coif-ure should be breath-taking in its simplicity—a mere exclamation point to emphasize the clarity and charm of the features," both experts agree. And for Miss Barclay, the hair should be simple, with slip into either at home or working, and the hair should be perfectly molded lines of her face.

beautiful model, is the exotic type

Dr. George Arthur Clarke, St. Andrew's, Boston, on Sunday concluded his five-week summer visit with the combined congregation of McEwain United and First Baptist churches when he accepted the pulpit at both morning and evening services.

Dr. Clarke, formerly pastor at First Baptist, returned before accepting a call to Boston, preached on "The Four R's of Discipleship" in the morning service, which was held at First Baptist. During the morning service he concluded a series of addresses in the junior high school on "The Parts of the Church."

Evening service was held at McEwain United by Dr. Clarke, who spoke on "The Prince of Life." One of the highlights of the evening was the inspiring music during the service. Address by the choir and solos by Mrs. How, Mrs. Haddock and Miss Lella Miller charmed the congregation. Several hymns and violin selections were given by Thompson J. J. Organist, was Mrs. F. Barber Smith.

During the morning and evening services, his subject at the morning service was "The Christian's Life." During the evening service he continued a series of talks on "Friends of Jesus."

Modern people have been inclined to neglect great works in the church, and added that it might have its place in modern life, was taking too great a hold on the people, and added that even in the churches the trend was to neglect the old and to neglect the strong basic works of religious organizations.

EDMONTON SUN
SIZZLES FOLK
AT 90.3 ABOVE

Yearly Hottest Day Of Year, But Record Remains At 99

A heavy rain started falling in the Edmonton district early Monday afternoon, but the temperature shot up to 90 above at 2:30 p.m. Prospects were for continued rain.

With the blissing sun driving thousands of peering citizens to city parks, bathing pools and beach stunts, the sun was holding Edmonton in its grip over the weekend. The temperature here Sunday soared up to the sizzling 90.3 above mark.

This was the highest point reached to date this year, the former 1939 record being 89.5, chalked up during April.

It was approximately nine degrees cooler than the all-time high heat record of 99 above set here on June 29, 1937.

Clouds and winds were opened wide as Edmontonians tried to catch a portion of the light breeze that was blowing, while all parks in the city were thronged with picnickers attempting to get away from the blazing sun. Riverside Park was crowded from noon until late evening.

At 3 p.m. the mercury soared to the 89 above mark, dropped a degree during the next hour and then zoomed past the 90 above mark at 4 p.m. After reaching the record high for the year, the mercury fell steadily until it reached 87 above at 5:30 a.m. Sunday.

"Continued warm" was the forecast for Edmonton and district but an overcast sky Monday morning and a brisk west to northwest breeze held the temperature well below Sunday's figure. At 9 a.m. the temperature reading was 68 above, barometric pressure was 30.1 increasing, giving promise of good weather.

Main fell in many portions of the near north country evening. Rain reported in the temperature at 80 above, Lethbridge showed 80 above, and at Regina 80 above, and in the Crown's Nest Pass territory, in the Brazeau and Rocky Mountain House districts and the Bow River forest reserve near Banff, the temperature was 80 above.

Well, cads, I had hoped today that I would have a complete list of the prizes which will be given away to winning contestants at the Jimmy Allen air races which are to be held at Bendrew Park under the sponsorship of the Lions' club. But Phil Davis tells me they are not just ready as he hopes to rattle up a few more before he publishes the list.

But I told Phil he had better get that list out fast. This little picture may look like an umpire calling two strikes on a batter. But it is me having out Phil for not having the list for today. The mass and the pudding are to protect me in case Phil takes a pass at me. And the two fingers mean that I am telling him I will give him just two more days to produce the list—or else.

In the meantime I would remind you that first prize is a trip to the World's Fair at San Francisco and second prize is a gold watch—and they are both certainly worth working for. But you had better get your planes at once. It is only two weeks until the races, which doesn't give you any more time than you need.

So hike right over to your nearest R. A. service station and buy your plane building kit. It only costs one buck and it would cost you at least three times as much to buy a similar kit from any other place. The plane is a dandy and it is easy to build. So get your set now and start on it at once. That is in no reason why you shouldn't win the trip to the World's Fair, and even if you don't there are dozens of other prizes.

The United States share in the international trade in 1938, including all aircraft, parts, instruments, engines and parachutes, amounted to $68,200,000 or $5.6 per cent.

International Peace Day Celebrated Sunday at World Poultry Congress

CLEVELAND, July 31—A cubic foot of earth brought from Parliament Hill, Ottawa, was deposited Sunday with samples from 27 other countries at the foot of the peace monument in the American Legion peace gardens of the cultural gardens of Cleveland, by Hon. James G. Gardiner, Dominion minister of agriculture.

This was one of the features of the international peace day at the second world's poultry congress.

The troops of Royal Canadian Mounted Police under the command of Superintendent A. S. Cooper, and the Saskatoon girls pipe band, attended the ceremony.

Today is Canadian day at the congress and Mr. Gardiner is guest of honor.

R. DOES BUSINESS
On Saturday the British Columbia congress committee which has an exhibit of Buff Orpingtons, Light Sussex, White Wyandottes, Silver Spangled Hamburgs, and Bantams at the congress—about 25 selected birds—did some good business. Orders were taken for 100 breeding barred rock cockerels.

50 White Leghorns breeding males, seven Light Sussex breeders and several cases of hatching eggs. The sales were made from one sample birds on exhibit to poultry breeders in Maryland, West Virginia, Tennessee, Washington and Cuba.

of the poultry industry holds in relation to Dominion's general agriculture. In the centre of the upper portion of the exhibit is a large map of Canada.

Bishop Praises Great Growth Of Canuck Air Force

VANCOUVER, July 31—Air Marshal W. A. Bishop arrived here Saturday after a three-hour flight from Calgary, on the last leg of an inspection tour of the Dominion's air bases.

The war-time flying ace, now senior member of the advisory council to the department of national defence, said he expects to remain on the Pacific coast for a week. He plans to visit Vancouver Island and Prince Rupert, B.C. later.

Air Marshal Bishop described as "marvellous" the progress made in building up the Royal Canadian Air Force in the past year. Another year, he said, would find it comparable to the "best in Europe" in quality of men, and equipment.

and placed him on mattresses and ambulance—was being taken to Kingman with him. Kingman was a member of the village council and was available. Mr. Hogan and the elderly cowboys took charge of Goldcrest temporarily. Most of the college crowd had to leave at 1 p.m. on schedule anyway. They explained that never did they expect to witness another adventure comparable to this one, and Roselle regretted that she barely had an opportunity to wave them a final thanks and farewell.

Dick drove the ambulance sedan, and while the four young people rolled carefully along they had opportunity for the talk they needed. Events had moved so swiftly, complications had been so great, that they had hardly had a chance to breathe. Roselle stated with calmness that tried to tell them about moving the money into the jail dungeon and having a fight with a mining man there.

"We know it," Christine put in solemnly. "We saw you, and heard the fight."

Dick was incredulous. Franklin had to be told all about that. Dick said he moved the money because the many people knew it was in the old mine shaft. Mrs. Hogan had even told the cowboys and infant, he had learned.

"And the ore samples sent in for assay, Roselle? Did you suddenly remember the old ore I had in mind a good 66 a ton, but remember that, now that I think of it, a hundred? No telling how much there is of it."

"That was Mrs. Hogan's discovery," Roselle declared. "She saw the ore and she was the first when she helped us out of the cave-in. But the money isn't all mine. We're all sharing it."

"No," Franklin said. "Goldcrest is your town. But I would like to keep my job if I can. I need it to get married on."

"You'll get the $2,000 reward, too," said Roselle, smiling. "You and Christine and Dick. You certainly deserve it—goodness!"

They didn't say anything more for a long minute or so. The young hearts were too full. Christine just sat, her slender legs folded under her, holding Franklin's hand and stroking his head lovingly. They were a little cramped in the rear of the sedan, although it was not uncomfortable because the pavement gave the car smooth rolling.

Roselle was in front with Dick and turned often to talk with the others.

"Hurt bad, Frank?" Dick asked then, without turning.

"Not much. Not bleeding any more either."

"I am so happy about everything, I think I am going to cry!" Christine said, and did cry right then with Franklin patting her and murmuring sweet things to her.

Now there is something magic about tears. And about love, too, of course.

The old and the new, frustration and determination, a melody of hopes and outlooks, blend in ancient Palestine, a land seemingly filled for peace and meditation, but instead, torn by rifts and hatred, where officials vainly seek a way of bringing order from a situation that finds Jews and Arabs apparently unable to ever dwell side by side as friendly neighbors.

Typical of innumerable deferred hopes is the old man, lying his bow at Kfar Chasidim, one of the many who journeyed from after to spend his last few years in Palestine, only to find that even as he stands at his daily tasks he must be on the alert for raids by Arabs. At Tel Aviv a young Jewish girl stands guard, shouldering a heavy shotgun, one of the many who pressed into service by the Jewish settlement, where men in the fields must be constantly watched for Arabs fearful of their influx into the country, despite the many thriving communities they have built where before there had been only desert.

ROSIELEE DICK and CHRISTINE PALMER, partners in a summer tourist business at Goldcrest.

Yesterday, while Christine goes to the bank, Dick is wounded. Dick starts after Roselle, catches up with her, but she has gone. At that moment they are Quail fall when the house is struck by a lightning bolt. Dick remembers Quail after Quail but he remembers Quail, carries a gun.

CHAPTER XVIII
ALMOST the entire party that day at Goldcrest, 80 or 70 persons in all, headed by Roselle, hastened down the cactus-studded slope to discover Richard Bancroft walking back toward them.

"Dick!" Roselle shrieked from afar.

The terrible fear that was intensified when she had heard Quail shooting, lessened a bit now. At least Dick could walk!

She came running fast and without another word she was in his arms.

"What you need, little girl," he murmured, as he might have soothed a child, "is somebody to make you behave. You mustn't chase off after criminals that way, my lordly Roselle girl."

"Dick! Are you hurt?"

"No. Of course not. My horse was bounding and twisting around the Joshua trees. I wasn't a good target for any bullet."

"But you—"

"That was a man named Quail. Roselle, Franklin got the dope on him in town. There's $2,000 reward for him and the man who helped him. I knew he'd come back. I didn't expect him to be so broad daylight. And you—"

Roselle, you're a spongy kid!" "Richard! Dick!" she was trembling a little now, and looking up at him.

And then he dropped his arm away for a moment her shoulders, as he walked with her, because the crowd had arrived in a flurry of questions and excitement. Dick grinned happily at them.

"The man's back there on the road," he explained. "I had to come him. Somebody please take him in charge. He's an escaped convict, a murderer."

That excited all the tourists around, and diverted their attention to Quail. They rushed to him in a body.

Mrs. Hogan had come belatedly to meet them now, and they walked back into the ghost town with her. Their first demands were about Christine and Franklin.

"Mister Franklin was hit in the leg!" Mrs. Hogan said. "But I looked badly at it and I don't believe it's much. He might've been killed. Whoever saw it, honey? I declare, I never see such excitement!"

They hurried to the old bank and found Franklin lying calmly on the front porch, with his head in Christine Palmer's lap. Christine looked frightened and pale, but Franklin was smiling.

"Great news!" Franklin greeted the others. "Christine kissed me!"

"So say!" Dick began, pointing to his friend. "You—"

"Yeah, we're going to be married some day. Tell them it's true, Roselle! I want to hear it!"

Christine nodded and held out her hand. "Engagement ring!" she barely whispered it, as if she had been her emotional sister. But she smiled happily.

"Cool!" said Franklin, resumed. "Genuine perfumed wood, set in mail. Lucky I had it at the crucial moment when she gave herself away!"

He had been holding her hand and now he squeezed it and looked up at her.

"We'll get you to a hospital at once, Franklin!" Roselle cried. "You so happy for you and Christine. But goodness, your leg! We must—"

"They had to let me do. So much that there wasn't much time for private talk and explanation. The tourists were milling about and everybody tried to help or ask questions."

Within half an hour they had dressed Franklin's wound carefully
